

LITIFY ESTABLISHES SECURITY AND PRIVACY GROUP AND WELCOMES TRAVIS HOWE, FORMER CISO OF CONGA

NEW YORK – 4 October 2019 – Litify is excited to announce the establishment of a security and privacy group and is thrilled to welcome Travis Howe as our Chief Information Security Officer (CISO).

Over an impressive career that spans nearly three decades, Howe has held several leadership positions in information security and privacy.

Most recently, he was CISO of Conga, a Salesforce ISV partner focused on document generation, contracts, and e-signatures.

Prior to Conga, Howe held multiple roles in the public sector including cyber security program manager for the western third of the U.S. electrical power grid, lead security architect for the nation's 911 next-generation services, and a U.S. Navy cryptologist.

"Travis brings a wealth of security and privacy experience to Litify, and I am very excited to have him on board as our CISO," said Litify Chief Technology Officer Jeff Argast. "Legal technology intersects with every aspect of security, privacy, and compliance, and his addition to the product and technology leadership team solidifies our success as we continue to grow and expand."

Litify prides itself on maintaining a legal technology suite that meets the industry's highest security standards. Built on Salesforce, the world's most trusted cloud-based platform, Litify offers secure identity management, data encryption, and redundancy.

LITIFY'S SECURITY AND PRIVACY GROUP IS COMMITTED TO PROTECTING CLIENT DATA

Hiring Howe, whose experience in the field is unparalleled, is a testament to Litify's priority of delivering the most secure legal software possible to its clients.

"I am thrilled to be joining Litify where I will have the opportunity to lead the company into a new chapter of maturity in how we secure the privacy of highly sensitive customer information," said Howe. "It was apparent from the outset that Litify is passionate about its customers, and coupled with the experienced leadership team, this is a great opportunity all around."
